Common Grounds, by DAAS

The concept for Common Grounds draws on imagery, symbols and color palate relating to First Responders and the City of Ocala. The primary focal point of the artwork is an illustration of two hands engaged in a common greeting known as a "fist bump", surrounded by representations of the seals associated with First Responders.

DAAS is an American contemporary artist, internationally recognized for his vibrant, colorful, engaging paintings and murals.

Life Cycle*, by Drake Arnold

Artist Drake Arnold, completed Life Cycle as a gift to the City and Marion Cultural Alliance (MCA) in the courtyard of MCA.

The concept for this mural was inspired by Arnold's homestead that he began creating with his family last year. After developing an intense passion for gardening, a variety of animals including chickens, ducks, turkeys, a rabbit and a pig were added to the thriving farm, creating his own paradise.

Chatter Bugs

A Friendly Exchange*, by Adam Wall

The City of Ocala's Cultural Arts and Sciences Division commissioned two sculptural seating projects, Chatter Bugs and A Friendly Exchange at the new MLK First Responder Campus.

Artist Adam Wall's, interactive, steel-fabricated seating elements are themed around the concepts of community, partnership, and communication. These playful looking sculptural forms are intended for interaction with children and adults, allowing safe opportunities for whispering into through the antennae or climbing and crawling through the center.

They were installed on September 30, 2020 with the assistance of our Parks and Electric Crews. The campus is scheduled to open mid-November.

Sarasota, FL

Unconditional Surrender is being removed in Sarasota for construction of a roundabout. There has been some controversy about putting it back up.

Some say it's not art, some say it represents the veterans, the #metoo people don't like it.
